The goal of this proposal is to better understand the molecular mechanisms that regulate vascular endothelial growth factor (VEGF) signaling and angiogenesis in the developing brain. Previously we showed that the orphan nuclear receptor Nurr1 is a negative regulator of VEGF signaling in endothelial cells. In this grant we hypothesize that Nurr1 directly represses the transcriptional activity of VEGF by binding to the VEGF promoter. In addition, we hypothesize that Nurr1 downregulates VEGF expression by stimulating the expression of a microRNA, miR-218, a VEGF inhibitor that negatively regulates VEGF expression in tumors. Specific aims to test these hypotheses are: Aim 1: To determine if Nurr1 represses VEGF in endothelial cells. Our working hypothesis is that Nurr1 represses VEGF transcription by binding to the promoter of VEGF, resulting in decreased VEGF signaling. The studies will be conducted using two endothelial cell lines (BEC and HUVEC). The VEGF promoter region will be cloned into luciferase reporter vectors and the resulting constructs will be transfected into BEC and HUVEC. VEGF mRNA and protein levels in these cells will be determined by qRT-PCR and Western Blot analysis. Aim 2: To investigate if miR-218 mediates Nurr1 effects on VEGF in endothelial cells. Our working hypothesis is that Nurr1 directly represses the expression of VEGF in endothelial cells. The studies will determine whether Nurr1 alters miR-218 expression in endothelial cells. miR-218 will be cloned into luciferase reporter vectors to determine if Nurr1 alters miR-218 expression. Aim 3: To determine if miR-218 mediates the effects of Nurr1 on VEGF in vivo. Our working hypothesis is that Nurr1 represses the expression
