References Category:Unincorporated communities in Huntington County, Indiana Category:Unincorporated communities in Indiana Category:Indianapolis metropolitan area U.S. economy rebounding after foreclosure crisis - dvdhnt ===== bradleyjg The guy who wrote the article reads like a total socialist. The "rebound" is due to foreclosures limiting what banks can do (for example, unable to promote) and the stronger economy which allows them to make money on their balance sheet rather than just the assets on the liability side. ----- clarkmoody Quoting: > Another big key is the recent rise in the stock market. It has been clear > that the U.S. housing market's recovery has fed into the broader economy. > The reason: when there are more homeowners carrying mortgage debt, it > crimps their spending power. Apparently the "house" has been all but forgotten as a driver of GDP (just like the "10% reserve requirements" were forgotten). ----- makomk 0cc13bf012

If we had not had these people there to begin with, Australian would have been a very different country today. Today, in Sydney and other parts of NSW, we celebrate and pay tribute to the first Chinese community to arrive in Australia. This group of migrant workers settled in Sydney in the 19th century, escaping the persecution of the emperor of China. People like the late Mr Van Heegen, who founded the Chinese Benevolent Society in 1854 and who ran a coffee shop on Mott St. There were many others, like Mr Victor Fong, who wrote the first Chinese-language newspaper in Australia, the Sydney Morning Herald in 1856. Remembrance Memorials to some of the Chinese people who helped to build the foundations of Australia can be seen at Old Surry Hills. One of these memorials is the one marking the graves of the Chinese who died in a 1854 plague that swept the Sydney before the Chinese were allowed into the settlement. Today, Australian governments continue to pay a great debt to these Chinese migrant workers who helped to build a better Australia for all of us.1.
