A B.C. candidate who claimed more than $30,000 in donations from his aunt is now barred by Elections B.C. from paying his election expenses. The ruling comes less than two weeks before a B.C. byelection scheduled in Richmond, B.C., where George Abbott and his opponent, Erin Shum, are vying for a seat in the B.C. Legislature. Abbott, who has held the Richmond-Steveston riding since 2003, has acknowledged that his aunt, Sandra Farmer, is the true source of his funds. According to his personal financial disclosure form, he reported more than $30,000 in donations from her. As of Oct. 31, his campaign treasury held nearly $40,000. "It's all been straight up and down, and there hasn't been a single cent that's been loaned or been advanced by Sandra or anyone else," said Abbott. "I believe everything that I've said about the size of this campaign, and I expect that I will get b7e8fdf5c8
