My requirement is to scan all the files present in this folder for a pattern. From the pattern found, to find the latest file created for the folder. Can someone let me know how to do this using linux commands/ shell scripts. A: find /target/dir -type f -newer /target/dir/file The usefull flag for -newer /target/dir/file is -newer, since when using -newer you can specify the last modified/created date of a file. A: You can use the find command with -newer and a file pattern: find /target/dir -newer /pattern/file -print A: I've solved this long ago, You can search by the date like this : find /root -newer "/root/20170915/ABC123.txt" -printf "%a " | sort -nr -k 2 This will print (with sort) and without sort : Mon 09/15/2017 18:07:05 15:06:13 04:26:44 So on your case it will be : find /target/dir -newer /target/dir/file -printf "%a " | sort -nr -k 2 My answer is from 2016 (when I'm searching for the most recent file with this format). The two fighters, an F-15E and an F-16, were responding to a request from Japanese Air Self-Defense Force (JASDF) to intercept unidentified fast-flying objects in the Tsushima Strait area, which is located between Kyushu island and southern-most Shikoku island. The intercept took place late on Sept. 22 at approximately 5:56 a.m. local time, according to the JASDF. The two Russian-made objects were identified as unknown cruise missiles. After the missiles were launched and destroyed, the two pilots returned safely to Okinawa air base. A pair of Japanese F-15s fly alongside the leader, as two Japanese F-2, in formation with a US F-15 in the background, during the exercise on Sept. 22, 2019 at bases in Okinawa Prefecture. The first intercept took place around 11 a.m. local time in the area of the Tsushima Strait, according to the JASDF. A second intercept took place around 4 p.m. local time in the same area.
