second paragraph of the complaint. Those paragraphs assert that: (1) the May 22, 1991 order did not authorize the Department of Employment Security to seek a supersedeas bond; and (2) the May 22, 1991 order did not grant the Department of Employment Security twenty (20) days from the entry of the May 22, 1991 order in which to comply with the order and institute the administrative proceedings that were to be stayed. These are not, strictly speaking, arguments raised by the plaintiff in the trial court or in this appeal. The parties throughout this litigation have assumed the May 22, 1991 order authorized the Department of Employment Security to seek a supersedeas bond and that the order granted the Department of Employment Security twenty (20) days to comply with the order. We will not belabour the point further. [3] Pursuant to Neb.Rev.Stat. § 25-1902 (Reissue 1989), this court has the power to determine what judgment should have been rendered, and if necessary, to render the same. Ordinarily, when an appellate court determines that additional proceedings would be conducive to a correct and uniform judgment, this court will remand the cause to the trial court. However, we note that if any suitable remand has occurred in the trial court, it may be necessary to render the required judgment. [4] This case was appealed, no supersedeas bond was sought, and no supersedeas bond was filed. The trial court
