One of the new features, HDR Toning, is extremely sophisticated. By creating the image from 20 exposures, the High Dynamic Range Toning algorithm is able to capture more detail. It's perfect for high-contrast shots where having more detail in the shadows or highlights can be important. This feature is also available in the Organizer which is accessed from the Edit menu. To use this feature, go to Menu » More » Tone Mapping and start a new tone mapping project (just like what is seen here). We'd love to see a video of this feature! It is featured in the new Gamut panel as well. This post is likely to become a multi-part series, as features come and go in the software and Related Resources is constantly growing. I will be testing these new features on a wide variety of Photoshop models that I have available so you are sure to see how they come along. If you're looking for the ideal price and can live without lenses, I definitely recommend image editing programs. If you have the budget for a program that has a robust set of features and tools, as you can see, this is the best program. With all these version updates, the power of Photoshop CC for creative professionals will only increase. Whether you're a freelance photographer or a business owner or an illustrator, the new features in this powerful Photoshop CS6 release will only serve you better – more power is better, and now you have access to AI and AI Brushes in addition to what came with CS6. For me, the design, function and ease-of-use are the factors that drive my computer skills. Whether I am an architect, an interior designer, an architect/interior designer or a studio engineer, I am able to generate far more work in most of my projects, and faster, with graphic productivity tools. If you enjoy the full appearance of the design and function of the tools, then you will appreciate and thank Power User tools: Adobe Creative Cloud, PPro and Photoshop Creative Cloud – you will learn to use it to maximize the potential of the tools. PPro is like a train and one can learn to control everything – from the pull and lever to the brake and speed control. We know that training reduces our accidents and injuries, but we now live with more power and this means that we must use every tool available to us, to keep from running into things.
